Heat creating problems county-wide

Crop damage imminent and widespread

By Larry Rowell
Staff Writer

Triple digit temperatures combined with no rain has area corn and soybean farmers wondering if they'll be able to make a crop this year.

With only a slight chance of rain forecast for the next week, every day is critical, especially with the corn crop.

"This is the roughest that I've seen it since the drought of 1983 and 1988," said Tim Harris, a Southern States crop consultant for central Kentucky.

Harris, himself a farmer who lives in Campbells-ville, said he's toured areas around Casey County and with the exception of Bardstown and New Haven, other areas remain dry.

"Everybody's hurting right now because of the heat," Harris said. "As I talk to farmers, there's nothing but doom and gloom."

Corn that was planted the beginning of April has begun to pollinate and without rain, farmers can expect reduced yields per acre.

Clement Woodrum, who along with his sons planted about 1,500 acres of corn in the Clements-ville area, said they planted corn beginning April 4.

"Half of what we got has already pollinated and without rain, it'll cut our crop 30 to 40 percent," Woodrum said. "We were shooting for 200 bushels an acre, but now, if we get 100, I'd be tickled," he said.

The Woodrums have also planted 900 acres of soybeans that he says are fairing a little better.

Corn that was planted later in the spring may look better now but it will need rain in order to start the pollination process.

"The later planted corn hasn't tasseled out and could do better than corn that's weeks ahead of it," said University of Kentucky Agriculture Extension Agent Will Stallard.

Stallard also said that if no rain arrives soon, farmers will need to talk with their crop insurance agents. However, even with crop insurance, farmers won't recoup their losses, Harris said.

"It may pay for some of the crop, but it won't pay for the land and equipment costs and other payments," he said.

Still, Harris said that God knows what farmers need and he's praying for rain.

"It started raining in 1988 when it wasn't supposed to," he said.

Burn ban

While farmers are concerned about their crops, other possibilities for catastrophe from the drought have county officials planning ahead.

Casey County Judge/Executive Ronald Wright issued a county-wide burn ban on June 27, but the ban does not include fireworks.

"It's just so dry and it's something we've done before," Wright said, adding that surrounding counties have also issued burn bans.

Wright said on Friday that if some rain should fall the first of the week, then he might lift the ban.

County audit shows corrections needed

By Larry Rowell
Staff Writer

While there is no evidence of illegal or fraudulent activity in the 2011 Casey County Fiscal Court budget audit, the state auditor's office nevertheless has cited the court for numerous "non-compliance" book-keeping irregularities.

What it boils down to is better record-keeping.

"The Casey County Fiscal Court needs to do a better job of financial management," said Bob McBeath, a lawyer in Kentucky State Auditor Adam Edelen's office in Frankfort.

The annual financial examination stated that, as a part of the audit process, the auditor comments on the court's non-compliance with laws, regulations, contracts and grants.

"The fiscal court should improve purchase and procurement procedures," citing 136 expenditures such as 113 invoices that were not stamped "cancelled" to prevent duplicate payments.

The audit also stated that 18 vendor payments had no evidence of fiscal court approval.

Casey County Judge/Executive Ronald Wright said that many of these issues have to do with timing of meetings that deal with budget transfers and lease plans already in place.

"The 18 vendor payments were lease payments fiscal court voted to lease equipment, and the monthly lease amount,"

Wright said, maintaining the court has done this before.

"This is the 12th year that I've been doing this and we've done it the way I've been instructed to," Wright said.

New non-compliance issues were also cited with a major purchase the court made last year.

"The fiscal court should either deal directly with state price contract vendors or advertise for bid on purchases

Prices to increase for paid school lunches; healthy changes coming

By Amanda Cole
Staff Writer

There are a lot of changes coming to school meals in Casey County and across the nation.

Students will be served more fruits and vegetables under new tough federal nutrition standards, meal prices will increase and a new on-line payment program called My School Bucks will be offered.

Casey County Food Service Coordinator Elaine Ford thinks that the changes may get a grumble from the kids at first, but it will make a positive difference down the road.

"Quite honestly, with obesity problem that (the U.S.) has, I feel like introducing kids to new, healthy foods will impact them later in life," Ford said.

The schools started the program in small steps in April and May of last school year.

"We wanted a slow transition to try to introduce the kids to foods they most likely haven't eaten before," Ford said. "The split peas didn't go over well, neither did the sweet potatoes."

The schools need to consider the guidelines, but also the children, she said.

For example, during the Summer Food Service Program, Ford said some Vacation Bible School students didn't know what cauliflower was, but after they gave them a small package of ranch dressing more than half of the children ate their cauliflower and wanted more.

"I was thrilled," Ford said.

There will be changes all around, especially for the kitchen staff.

"They are going to have to learn the new portion sizes for each age group and they will most likely be learning new recipes because we have to reduce intake of sodium," Ford said. "We've got a great staff, they'll do a great job."

New nutrition standards

Due to the Healthy, Hunger Free Kids Act of 2010, major changes are being made to school meals.

Meal pattern requirements are now broken down into three sections by grade — K-5, 6-8 and 9-12 — for grains and meat/meat alternative food groups. The change is to ensure age-appropriate calorie limits.

Other changes include:

■ Larger servings of vegetables and fruits; students must take at least one serving of produce.

■ A wider variety of vegetables, including dark green and red/orange vegetables and legumes.

■ Fat-free or 1 percent milk; flavored milk must be fat-free.

■ More whole grains; at least half of the grains must be whole grain-rich.

■ Less sodium.

Price increases

Reduced prices will remain the same districtwide at 30 cents for breakfast and 40 cents for lunch. However, prices will increase for paid students. Breakfast will go to $1 for breakfast, up 50 cents.

Elementary and middle school students will pay

$1.50 for lunch, up from $1.25. High school lunch will increase to $1.75, up 25 cents.

The Casey County Board of Education approved the new prices on June 11.

In order to meet the new requirements for the Healthy, Hunger Free Kids Act of 2010 the prices had to be increased, Ford said.

Section 205 of the act, "Equity in school lunch pricing," (Public Law 111-296) states that schools are required to charge students for paid meals at a price that on average equals to the difference between free meal reimbursement and paid meal reimbursement.

Schools charging less are required to increase their prices 10 cents annually until they meet the requirements. The law allows schools to establish a higher increase at their discretion.

Casey County School Food Service Director Teresa Terry told board members that the district is required to increase 10-cents per year, but if a higher increase is made, another increase may be avoided next school year.

The price increase will help with the additional cost of food to meet state and federal requirements.

"The state department is pretty much requiring us to raise lunch prices," Ford said. "The bottom line is we have to increase the prices because of the quantity of food we are going to be giving out next year and the foods we are going to have to start serving are going to cost more."

County's efforts to be commended

The annual Casey County Fiscal Court audit is out and, taken on face value, it's much like the ones released the past five years.

State Auditor Adam Edelen's office uses contract auditors to go into county courthouses and examine the financial records for the previous year.

While we are of the opinion that this is a necessary function of government to hold local governments accountable when it comes to handling the people's tax money, the results of the audit seem worse than they really are.

No fiscal impropriety was alleged or uncovered in any way, shape, fashion, or form in the latest county audit.

However, there are pages of auditors' suggested "corrections" proffered to make the county/judge executive's office run more effectively and efficiently.

Judge/Executive Ronald Wright answered each of these corrections as he has done every year.

For example, auditors stated that concerning some federal grant money used at Gateway Park, certain forms didn't meet a filing guideline.

Wright said that he filed the forms according to deadlines and asked for extensions on others.

What we do know is this. Wright said that the county would rebuild the park after the devastating flood in May 2010. And that's exactly what the county did.

Gateway Park, including the Community Center, has been rebuilt and is better than before.

Casey County kids have top-of-the-line, lighted ball-fields on which to enjoy America's favorite pastime.

The Community Center is once again a place where family reunions can be held in comfort while the kids play on the new playground.

Our county roads are in relatively decent shape and the Central Kentucky AG/EXPO Center remains a crown jewel in the county.

Indeed, money needs to be spent according to Kentucky law. Done legally, we all benefit.

But we will continue to support a court and judge who have the county's best interests at heart.

And that, ain't much ado about nothing.

Nostrum ads still nauseating to read

I get a lot of e-mails, many which deal with business while others people think I need to see, such as political statements or funny pictures.

Included in my crowded e-mail inbox are also advertisements for everything from electronics to reducing one's stomach to achieve that slim look.

These are the ones that I absolutely, positively cannot stand but they nevertheless continue making their way into my inbox on a daily basis.

"Get six pack abs in as little as 10 minutes a day," or "52-inch flat screen TVs for $24.95!" And what about promises to cut my automobile insurance in half by following one secret, which is being shared only with Kentucky drivers.

While these e-mail electronic marvels of merchandising make promises they cannot honor, this is not a new thing.

Bogus ads like these have been appearing in newspapers for more than 200

I'm currently reading the 1948 book "The Southern Country Editor" by that marvelous Kentucky historian, the late Thomas D. Clark.

Clark researched country newspapers from a period just after the Civil War in 1865 to about 1920.

It's a great read about the life of country newspaper editors and the trials and travails of putting out a weekly rural newspaper.

Included in his research are several chapters on advertising and what ads ran in papers.

What he discovered was a plethora of ads for nostrums, tonics and elixirs promising to cure cancer, open barren wombs, lift the spirits, and grow hair.

Clark stated that from Civil War times to 1910, medicine companies subsidized much of the country weekly newspapers.

A Dr. Williams advertised "Pink Pills for Pale People, putting real stamina in the corpuscles, a blush in maidenly cheeks, and snap in the step."

One of the more popular tonics of that day was Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

It promised to "revive the drooping spirit, invigorate and harmonize the organic functions, give elasticity and firmness to the step, restore the natural luster of the eye, and plant on the pale cheek the beauty of fresh roses of life's spring and early summertime."

But the most astounding claim assured barren women that after taking the tonic, it would open their wombs by rearranging their reproductive organs.

Posted in these ads were supposed testimonial letters that attested to the effectiveness of the product.

In addition, to further hook the reader, the Pinkham ad offered $5,000 if the company couldn't come up with the original testimonial letter from a previously barren woman who, after taking the product, bore a gaggle of children.

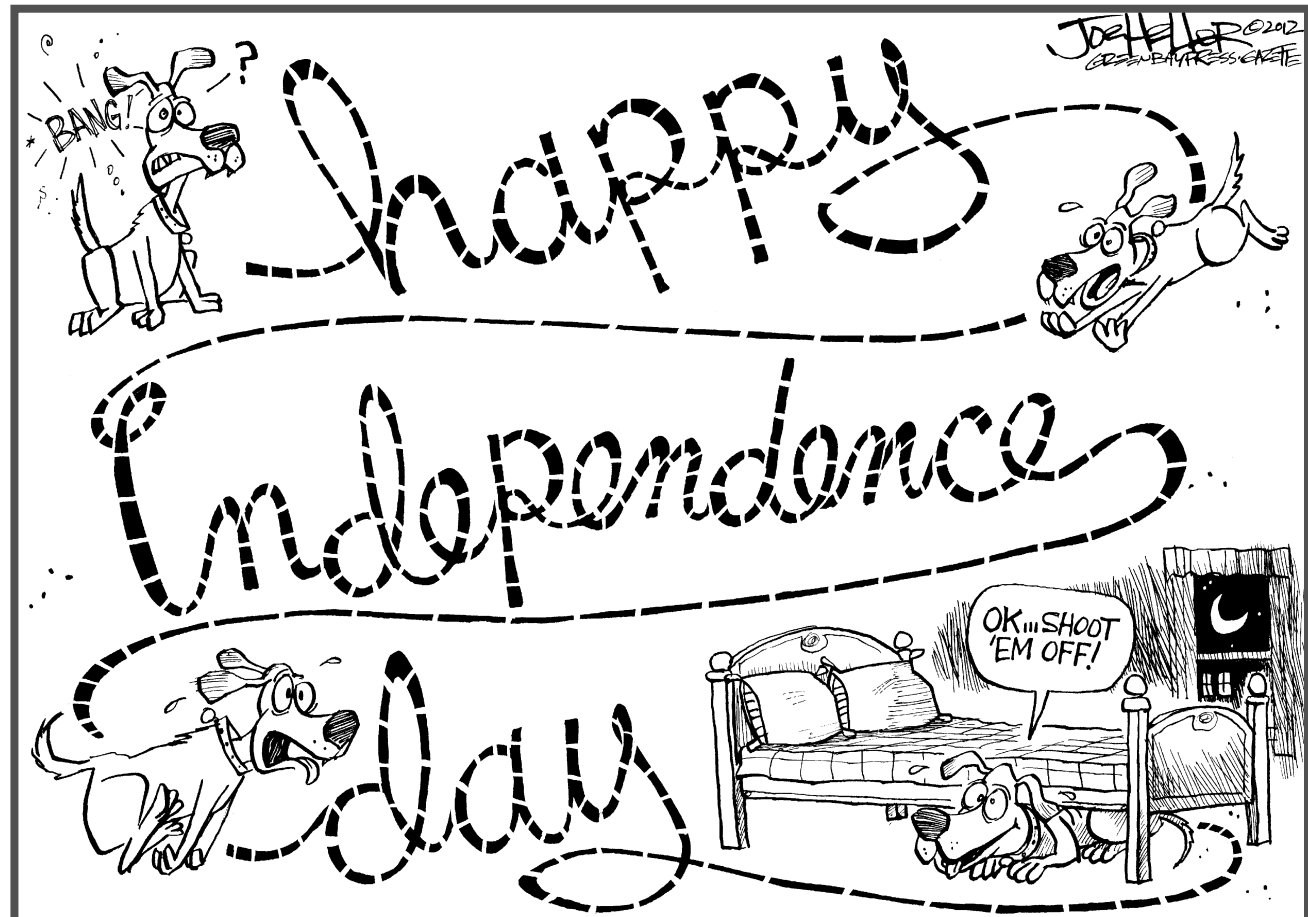

However, what is now known is the fact that most of these ridiculous nostrums contained anywhere from 20 to 30 percent alcohol.

That amount of alcohol was sure to "plant on the pale cheek the beauty of fresh roses..." and nothing more.

Clark said that he couldn't find where the public greatly objected to these ads. In fact, many of these elixir companies made millions of dollars promising health and happiness.

"Well," you say, "who would believe that nonsense today?" The same people who believe they can buy a 52-inch TV on the Internet for $24.95.

Maybe there is truth to the adage that "a fool and his money are soon parted."

You are what you eat

We have all heard that old saying, "You are what you eat." Well, right now I am a South Fork Mennonite produce stand if that is correct. I've been making inroads on their produce for about a month now.

I have had green beans cooked southern style (until they're almost khaki colored). I've had green beans and new potatoes. I've had green beans and pickled onions. I've had green beans sautéed. I've had more of the same all over again. I love fresh green beans but I will not eat them canned. That means I turn into a green bean junkie when the season rolls around.

Then there's corn. I've had it on the cob, cut off the cob and fried, cut off the cob and baked in my cornbread, and I've had it cut off the cob and cooked with green beans. As much as I like fresh corn, my sister loves it more. Nobody can go through it like she can. Before long we'll be freezing it together.

Tomatoes? Oh, yes, I have had them with every meal and have had "mater sammiches and BLTs in between. They are wonderful for breakfast with scrambled eggs.

I can't wait for the Casey County cantaloupes. I actually had a decent one from Georgia but it couldn't hold a candle to our Casey County cantaloupes. I dream of Casey County cantaloupes and my mouth waters just to think of them. I stocked up on bacon the other day because I love cantaloupe with bacon. Try it sometime. It's a great combination.

In the summer I could turn into a vegetarian without even trying. I couldn't be a vegan because I've got to have bacon grease in my green beans and bacon with tomatoes and cantaloupes.

I haven't hit the fresh peaches yet. I'm waiting for the South Carolina peaches to show up at the produce stand. I have gone through all the ones I canned last year so I'm going to have to start canning when they come in.

Joberta WELLS
Columnist

Did you ever have pickled okra? NO, it is NOT slimy! I love pickled okra and I need to can some of that, too. I also like okra sliced, rolled in cornmeal, and fried.

Later in the season I'll be scouring the countryside for green tomatoes to fry. I do fried green tomatoes like Mom did. Slice them, salt them on both sides so that they "weep" a little, and then roll them in cornmeal. Fry them in a good old iron skillet, drain them on a paper towel, and eat them standing up before they can even get to a plate. I have a nephew who likes them the same way – straight from the paper towel with fingers. Now that's a hoot.

I always dread the end of the summer produce. The saddest day of the year is when the local produce is gone. I almost feel like an old friend has died when that happens.

There is a day when you know fall is coming and that is the day when you get a yearning for pinto beans or chili. I also get a longing for Krispy Kreme doughnuts, sausage and gravy with biscuits, and all the things that will deposit another layer of fat to keep me warm while I hibernate. Hibernate? Oh, shoot, I'm not a bear. I forgot that.

In the meantime, I'm looking forward to the cantaloupes and all the green beans I can eat. Love those South Fork produce stands!

Like me, you've been on this road before, no doubt. It's the road home after you've been on a vacation, or weekend get-a-way, or retreat. And as that idyllic place — the lake, beach, cabin in the woods, or hotel — begins slowly to recede in your rear view mirror, you want to screech your breaks to a halt, turn around, and somehow grab your vacation spot and take it with you. You have this sinking feeling that you should have planned just one more day and that it's not time to go back to the daily grind in the old familiar place, no, not just yet, please.

Like the drowsy person hitting the snooze alarm, you want just a little more time. You want to stay. But you know you can't. Did you miss the road sign on your way out? BEWARE: PASSING INTO POST VACATION DEPRESSION ZONE.

We've all been there. It's characterized by that dark feeling of dread upon returning to the routine. And you feel a tinge of guilt because you've so enjoyed your time away that you should want to come back. And you do.

David B. WHITLOCK
Guest Columnist

But then again, you don't.

When our oldest daughter, now 24, was only 2, we went to Destin, Fla. for a vacation. As we pulled into our carport, I turned around to wake her and get her out of her car seat. Thinking she would be glad to be home, I cheerily said, "We're home."

I was surprised when she sleepily looked around, realized where she was, and then angrily kicked her legs and cried, "I want my vacation!"

You don't have to be an adult to enter the post vacation depression zone.

The first step out of it is admitting you are there. You probably aren't clinically depressed, just tired and longing for more time away. It's normal to pass into this zone; you just don't want to stay there.

Lori and I hadn't been able to celebrate our anniversary in several years, so this year we spent a couple of days at a resort. As I was in the elevator on our way to check out, the gentleman standing next to me was talking about how he had taken Monday off so he could enjoy a third day there.

"A third day," I thought, "that's what we need. Why didn't I...?"

I was primed for the post vacation depression zone.

So, Lori and I talked about it on the way home. It helps to admit how you are feeling.

Another thing that quickens the passage through the post vacation depression zone is to review what you most enjoyed. For years I've done that with our kids.

"Tell me your favorite moment," I would say.

And each of us would share. Doing so allows you to claim the good about the vacation and bring it into your present journey.

Sometimes thinking about what you liked most can teach you what you should try and change about your current lifestyle. Did you feel better because you were more rested? Was it having more time to talk, exercise, or read that you liked most? Think about ways you could incorporate the best of your vacation into a new routine. Being proactive can actually lift your spirit.

I've found it's best if I can have what I call a "buffer day" between the vacation and the return to work so that on that drive home, I'm not thinking about having to unpack and get ready for work the very next day. Unfortunately, that's not always possible. I recall the time I came back from vacation and immediately had to minister to a couple whose son had been murdered the night before. This year, I returned home from a week away late on a Thursday night to find I was needed at two funerals the next two days. If emergencies happen, they happen, but at least try and plan for a day to ease back before being thrown into the fray.

One last thing, and this is essential for passing through the post vacation depression zone. Remember to promise yourself you'll return for another time away.

This last healthy action will surely release you from the zone's grip, for after all, we need something pleasant to look forward to because we deserve and want our "vacation."

My School Bucks

New this year, My School Bucks will allow parents to access their child's meal account online.

Parents can go onto www.myschoolbucks.com and use a credit card, debit card or checking account to put money into their child's account.

"It's going to be great," Ford said. "The kids won't have to handle money, can't lose it and so forth. Parents will be dealing with it themselves."

The program will also allow parents to see what their kids are eating. Parents will be able to see if their child purchased a meal or if they bought an extra milk, Ford said.

A letter will be sent out in students' open house packets explaining the program in detail.

"There are so many changes," Ford said. "We'll step into it slowly and hopefully with a great outcome."

Eva Wethington recently received a Lifetime Achievement award for 50 years of outstanding service to Avon customers. Wethington is pictured next to her display of awards and Mrs. Albee figurines. Avon independent sales representatives receive a figurine each time they make President's Club.

'Precious memories' made selling Avon

By Amanda Cole
Staff Writer

Eva Wethington didn't plan to sell Avon for 50 years when she started out in April of 1962.

It all began when the high school friend she bought Avon from suggested Eva take her place.

"So I thought, well if I sell enough just to buy what I use, that would be pretty good," Wethington said. "So that's the way it started."

At the age of 24, becoming an independent sales representative for Avon was a way for Wethington to occupy her time while her husband, Harold, then a licensed hunting and fishing guide, was away for work.

"It was more or less a hobby to have something to do while he was gone, because back then he would be away a week at a time," she said.

The hobby didn't start out easy.

"When I started I didn't know anybody and I didn't talk, which made it very hard for me," she said. "Back then there wasn't doorbells, you had to knock on the door, and when that door opened, I was leery of how I was going to be confronted," she said.

But after she explained who she was and why she was there, everything was fine.

Wethington's first order was $81.

"The total order was $81 and I worked hard," she said. But now, "it's nothing to be sitting here, minding your own business, your phone ring and somebody give you a $100 to $150 order. So times has changed over 50 years."

There are some things that remain the same. Wethington still goes door-to-door for her customers. Orders come in every other Thursday. She spends that afternoon getting the orders bagged and ready. "Then I hit the road early the next morning," Wethington said. "I put in a long day."

She estimates she drives 100-150 miles for deliveries.

Wethington has been complimented on her "down to earth way of doing business." She doesn't own a computer and mails or calls in orders.

In 50 years, Wethington has only missed three or four campaigns. In the beginning, orders were taken once a month, but now campaigns happen every two weeks.

Wethington has been through several changes in Avon, which celebrated its 125th year in 2011.

When she started, she was in the Wildcat division. Now she's part of the Americana division. Distribution centers have changed from Illinois to Ohio, Georgia and back to Illinois.

"I've been through eight district managers in 50 years," she said. Fellow Avon representatives have passed away, entered nursing homes, moved away or stopped selling.

"I'm still plugging along," Wethington said.

There was a point when she thought about quitting when her mother passed away 23 years ago.

"If it hadn't have been for my customers and my husband, I would have quit," she said.

Wethington plans to continue selling Avon "as long as I can get in and out of the car."

LEGISLATIVE NEWS

New Kentucky laws go into effect in July; cover a wide range of issues facing state

Kentucky Press News Service

New laws approved during the Kentucky General Assembly's 2012 regular session go into effect on July 12.

That means passengers in large vans will soon be required to buckle up. Copper thieves won't be able to sell stolen materials for quick cash at recycling centers. And meth producers will have a harder time getting large amounts of a key ingredient needed to make their illegal drugs, according to a news release from the Legislative Research Commission.

The Kentucky Constitution states that legislation approved by the General Assembly goes into effect as state law 90 days after a legislative session ends, unless a bill specifies a different effective date or contains an emergency clause that makes it effective as soon as it is signed by the governor.

This year's regular session adjourned on April 12.

Among the issues covered by laws that go into effect July 12 are the following:

■ Blue Alert. SB 32 will establish a statewide emergency alert system to catch those suspected of injuring a police officer. The "Blue Alert" system, which is modeled after the Amber Alert system, will use law enforcement communication systems, electronic highway signs and media to spread information to catch perpetrators after an officer has been reported wounded or missing.

■ Coal mine safety. HB 385 will enforce new rules for miners who fail drug or alcohol tests. Offenders will be ineligible to hold mining licenses or certificates for three years. Penalties are more severe for repeat offenders. The legislation also outlines an appeals process for suspended miners.

■ Coal truck drivers. HB 411 will designate the Monday of the fourth week in August as Coal Truck Driver Appreciation Day.

■ Concealed deadly weapons. HB 484 will allow Kentuckians to carry concealed weapons on their property or place of business, if they are the sole proprietors, without a license.

■ Copper theft. HB 390 will help curb theft of copper and other valuable metals by ensuring thieves don't get immediate cash for the stolen goods at recycling centers. Instead, after showing proof of ownership, a check will be mailed to those selling certain metals to recycling centers. The legislation will also ensure that recycling centers receive reports on recently stolen metal items in the area so they can be on the lookout. The bill does not affect individuals recycling aluminum cans.

■ Confederate pensions. HB 85 will remove from the law books outdated language regarding pensions for Confederate soldiers.

■ Consumer protection. HB 421 will protect homeowners from being defrauded by providing a five-day grace period to cancel a signed roofing contract if the homeowner's insurance policy does not cover the repair work.

■ Diplomas. SB 43 will provide diplomas to students with disabilities who finish modified high school curriculums. The diploma will replace the certificate of completion the students currently receive.

■ Emergency room safety. SB 58 will allow officers to make arrests for misdemeanor assault with probable cause if the crime occurs in a hospital emergency room. Under current law, emergency rooms aren't exempt from the requirement that an officer must witness a misdemeanor assault in order to make an arrest.

■ Ethics. HB 402 will allow the Executive Branch Ethics Commission to share evidence with the state Personnel Board or the Auditor of Public Accounts if the information is needed for the agencies' investigations.

■ For-profit postsecondary schools. HB 308 will establish a new panel to regulate private for-profit colleges and universities in Kentucky. The legislation will replace the Kentucky Board for Proprietary Education with the Kentucky Commission on Proprietary Education and will limit the schools' membership to four seats. The legislation also calls for the creation of a compensation fund (paid for by the industry) for grievances of eligible Kentucky students and a revised student complaint review process.

■ Meth labs. SB 3 will boost efforts to stop production of methamphetamines by tightening rules on the purchase of certain cold and allergy medicines that contain an ingredient needed to make meth. The legislation will decrease the current monthly over-the-counter purchase limit of ephedrine and pseudoephedrine in pill or tablet forms from 9 grams to 7.2 grams and impose a 24 gram yearly limit. The measure will also replace the paper-tracking system currently in place for the purchase of medicines containing ephedrine and pseudoephedrine with a mandatory electronic system that will allow more real-time tracking.

■ National Guard Assistance Program. HB 224 will make Kentucky National Guard members eligible for financial assistance to help pay child adoption costs.

■ Personal-care homes. SB 115 will require a medical examination that includes a medical history, physical examination and diagnosis prior to admission to a personal-care home.

■ POW/MIA flags. HB 121 will require Prisoner of War and Missing in Action flags purchased or displayed by public institutions to be made in the United States.

■ School facilities. SB 110 will make it easier for school districts to allow community access to school facilities for recreational use during non-school hours by protecting the schools from liability in cases where an injury occurs.

■ Seat belts. SB 89 will expand Kentucky's seat belt law to include 15-person passenger vans. The bill was filed in response to a 2010 crash on I-69 near Munfordville that killed 11 people, most of whom weren't wearing seat belts. Current state law only requires seat belt use in vehicles designed to carry ten or fewer passengers.

■ Speed limits. HB 439 will allow the Transportation Cabinet to increase the speed limit on I-69 in Western Kentucky to 70 miles per hour.

■ Veterans' licenses. HB 221 will allow veterans to have their service designated on driver's licenses and state identification cards. The designations will make it easier for veterans to show proof of service needed for various discounts and special services available to them.

■ War memorial. HB 256 will establish a committee responsible for oversight of construction and upkeep of an Iraq/Afghanistan War Memorial.

■ Wild hogs. HB 344 will impose stiffer penalties on those who release feral hogs into the wild. The state's growing feral pig population is a threat to farmland, natural habitats and human health, experts say.

Bills go on the books July 12

July may not be a time normally associated with a rush of legislative activity, but in a key way, no month is busier.

That's because it marks the beginning of the state's fiscal year, and it also is when most of the new laws adopted earlier in the year by the General Assembly take effect. Unless there is an emergency clause or another specified date, all enacted bills officially go on the books 90 days after the end of a legislative session. This year, that falls on July 12.

That means, beginning next week, copper thieves will have a much tougher time making a quick buck; for-profit colleges will face tighter scrutiny; school coaches will have to be better trained to recognize and treat concussions; foster children will have more time to decide whether they want to stay in the state's care after they turn 18; coal miners will face more stringent rules if they abuse drugs; and 15-passenger vans will fall under the state's seatbelt law, which now only covers vehicles seating up to 10.

Emergency room workers will have more protection, since the law will now allow peace officers to arrest someone for fourth degree assault in emergency rooms even if the officer did not witness the crime, as is currently required.

Peace officers, meanwhile, will benefit from the newly established "blue alert," which will quickly notify the public if an officer is killed or severely injured in the line of duty and there is need to find the one responsible.

One of the more widely discussed laws this year will put some sensible limits on the sale of cold and allergy medicine containing pseudoephedrine in an effort to reduce a record number of meth labs. This legislation will limit individuals from buying more than 7.2 grams of pseudoephedrine a month and 24 grams per year. For perspective, a box of 48 pills, with each having a 30 milligram dosage, has only 1.44 grams of pseudoephedrine; that means five boxes could be bought per person in a month and 15 over a year.

It's important to note that this law has no effect on liquid or gel tab forms of medicine containing pseudoephedrine, since both are very difficult to use in meth production.

In educational matters, schools will now be able to apply to become "districts of innovation," which will allow them to try new, individualized approaches to boost academic performance. That could include significantly changing the school calendar or implementing new teaching methods in the classroom.

At the same time, special needs students who follow a modified curriculum will now be eligible to receive an alternative diploma in the coming school year rather than the certificate they now get, a move that will better recognize their accomplishment.

Under retirement matters, there will now be tighter rules on the Kentucky Retirement Systems – such as regular reviews by the state auditor and limits on the tenure of board chairmen – and Confederate pensions will be officially struck from the books as part of a house-keeping measure. Some 147 years after the end of the Civil War, we're pretty sure no one is still drawing a check.

At the same time all of these laws are being implemented, several task forces authorized by the General Assembly earlier this year are now set to get underway in the coming months.

Speaking of retirement systems, one of the new task forces will take a closer look at the way they are run and see how we can best preserve benefits in the decades ahead for the 450,000 local and state government workers, teachers and their retirees without putting an undue burden on other government programs.

Four other special committees will take an in-depth look at:

- The ongoing implementation of this year's far-reaching law designed to curb prescription drug abuse;

- Several legal matters involving juveniles, such as the best way to handle those 10 and younger who commit a crime;

- Improving student access to technology; and

- How we can improve oversight of sporting events involving middle schools.

On a related note, Gov. Beshear has appointed a separate task force that is now traveling the state to gauge the public's thoughts on tax reform, another subject that could come before the General Assembly in 2013.

I will of course keep you updated on the progress of these special committees, as well as the other long-established ones that the legislature relies on to review such areas as education, transportation and the judiciary.

In the meantime, please feel free to contact me if you have any questions or comments about these issues or any other affecting the state. I can be reached by writing to Room 329B, Capitol Annex, 702 Capitol Avenue, Frankfort, KY 40601.

You can also leave a message for me or for any legislator at 800-372-7181. For those with a hearing impairment, the number is 800-896-0305.

Hospital tax will be reinstated

ADAIR COUNTY — Facing a potential shortfall of $2.5-$3 million or more after Westlake Regional Hospital is sold to LifePoint Hospitals, Inc. the hospital's board of trustees is taking the first steps to reinstate the Special Voted Hospital District Tax which was last collected 18 years ago in order to make up the deficit.

The board authorized Interim CEO Rodger Klein to begin the process of reinstating the tax. The tax rate would be 3.7 cents per $100 of assessed value on real estate and personal property, the same rate it was being levied out when it was discontinued.

Man indicted for murder, assault, and tampering with evidence

BOYLE COUNTY — Thomas Hager Jr. was indicted by a Boyle County grand jury that charged him with two counts of murder and one count each of first-degree assault and tampering with physical evidence.

Hager was accused of shooting Ted Sparks of Danville and Mark Snyder of Waynesburg; both died of their wounds. The murder charges are capital offenses and the death penalty is possible.

Hager also was accused of shooting Philip White of Lancaster; he survived the shooting. Hager is also accused of attempting to conceal evidence in the crimes.

According to Danville police, Hager confessed to shooting the three men. He is being held without bond at the Boyle County Detention Center. A date for arraignment has not been set.

Fireworks and burn bans issued in Hustonville

LINCOLN COUNTY — Hustonville's mayor, Marc Spivey, issued a burn and fireworks bans for Hustonville. Spivey said the bans will be in effect until further notice. He said that with the dry conditions in the area, fireworks pose an unnecessary fire hazard. He was also concerned that water needed by firefighters to extinguish blazes would deplete water resources that could be in short supply if the drought continues.

The bans in Hustonville came as firefighters from Boyle and Lincoln counties battled a forest fire south of Junction City last week.

Two Lebanon men face rape charges

MARION COUNTY — Two Lebanon men are facing first-degree rape charges, and a Lebanon woman has been accused of complicity to rape.

Randall P. Smith, 24, and Dylan T. Humphrey, 21, both of Lebanon, have been accused of first-degree rape for incidents that occurred between Jan. 5 and Feb. 29. The indictments read that they engaged in sexual intercourse with another person by forcible compulsion or engaged in sexual intercourse with a person who is incapable of consent because she was physically helpless, or they aided, abetted or counseled with another in said act.

Dylan Humphrey and Natasha M. Humphrey, 20, are facing charges of complicity to first-degree rape. Their indictments read that they solicited, commanded or engaged in a conspiracy with another person or people to commit rape.

Somerset goes 'wet'

PULASKI COUNTY — The residents voted in last week's election to bring alcohol to the city of Somerset. The final outcome was 2,176 votes for alcohol sales and 1,464 against.

This outcome means Somerset will be allowed sales of retail package liquor as well as individual drinks in restaurants of a certain size. Burnside, which went "moist" eight years ago, can only serve individual drinks in restaurants.

Before liquor can be sold in Somerset, the city will need to put its policies into ordinance form and work with the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (ABC) on the distribution of licenses. The earliest a business could apply for a liquor license is 60 days after the election is certified.

Steve Humphress, general counsel for ABC, said they will be sending a notice to the local newspaper telling them the ABC is accepting applications. Humphress said ABC will not accept applications until it knows the city has its ordinances in line. After that, ABC will notify city residents of the number and types of licenses for which they can apply.

Humphress said licenses would probably be based on the population of Somerset, which is around 12,000 people, instead of the population of the county as is stipulated in Kentucky law (804 KAR 9:050).

Russell County to get new warning sirens

RUSSELL COUNTY — The Russell County Fiscal Court has been awarded a U.S. Department of Homeland Security FEMA pre-disaster mitigation grant in the amount of $147,237 for the installation of 10 additional warning sirens throughout Russell County.

In order to receive the grant Russell County must match the grant at 25 percent, or $49,079, but much of that cost can be mitigated through "in-kind" compensation of a combination of labor, materials and use of county land, according to Russell County Emergency Manager H.M. Bottom.

The 10 new sirens will be strategically placed to affect the greatest number of people without overlapping the 18 sirens already in place.

Beshear brings money for water tank

TAYLOR COUNTY — Gov. Steve Beshear was in Taylor County on June 26 to announce that the city of Campbellsville has received a $746,000 grant to help fund a water tank project in the industrial park.

Mayor Tony Young said the city applied for a Community Development Block Grant for the water tank project last year and was turned down. He said he talked to Gov. Beshear and other officials about how the city desperately needed the project to come to fruition. He was told to re-apply.

The grant will be used toward the design and construction of a 1 million gallon water storage tank and the removal of two unsafe and deteriorated tanks built in the 1950s.

The city of Campbellsville operates a water treatment and distribution system for the city and part of Taylor County. The current system includes six water storage tanks. The state's Division of Water has issued warnings for two of the tanks, citing their poor condition.

The Sizemores have eight children from 1-19 years old. Some of the children help out with the restaurant.

“Rebecca is our main baker; she loves it and she’s excellent,” Amy said.

Produce is purchased fresh at Laverne’s Produce Stand just down the road.

The couple settled on the name The Wagon Trail for a number of reasons.

“We live in the Menno- nite area and all the wagons go right down here, so it’s kind of the wagon trail,” Amy said. “A lot of people walk up because they want to sit and watch the horse and buggies go by.”

Secondly, Nathan, origi- nally from Oregon, and Amy, from Danville, moved here from the northwest state seven years ago.

The western-theme build- ing has four covered picnic tables in front. A corn hole game is set up and horse- shoes will be added soon.

Business has been going really well. Around 600 cus- tomers came in the first three weeks.

“It’s been really busy,” she said. Most customers heard about the restaurant from friends and family members.

“We’ve had mostly local customers,” Amy said. “We thought it was going to be tourists coming along this road.”

The Sizemores plan to have the restaurant open year round if they get enough traf- fic. In the winter, soups, chili and cornbread will be added to the menu.

The family is enjoying the new business.

“We love it,” Amy said. “It’s the most fun you can have working and we get to meet new people every day.”

The Wagon Trail accepts cash only and is located at 730 South Fork Creek Road, past the Casey County Pro- duce Auction. To find out about daily specials or to place a takeout order, call 706-5334. The Wagon Trail is also on Facebook.

The Bedford Inn renovations making local impact

By Amanda Cole
Staff Writer

Renovations are well un- derway at The Bedford Inn in Liberty.

Owners Nicki and Doug Johnson held an open house on June 25 to invite the community to check out the newly renovated lobby and breakfast area, as well as three updated rooms.

Around 300 guests attend- ed the ribbon cutting, which coincided with the visit of former owner Lillian Brown, who operated and lived at the Brown Motel with her late husband, Charles.

“It was important she like what we had done to her home,” Nicki said.

People had frequently stopped by before the open house to check the progress and would always say, “Lil- lian would love this.”

And she did.

“She loved every single thing we had done,” Nicki said.

When the Johnsons pur- chased the property from the Casey County Bank in March, the first area they wanted to work on was the lobby.

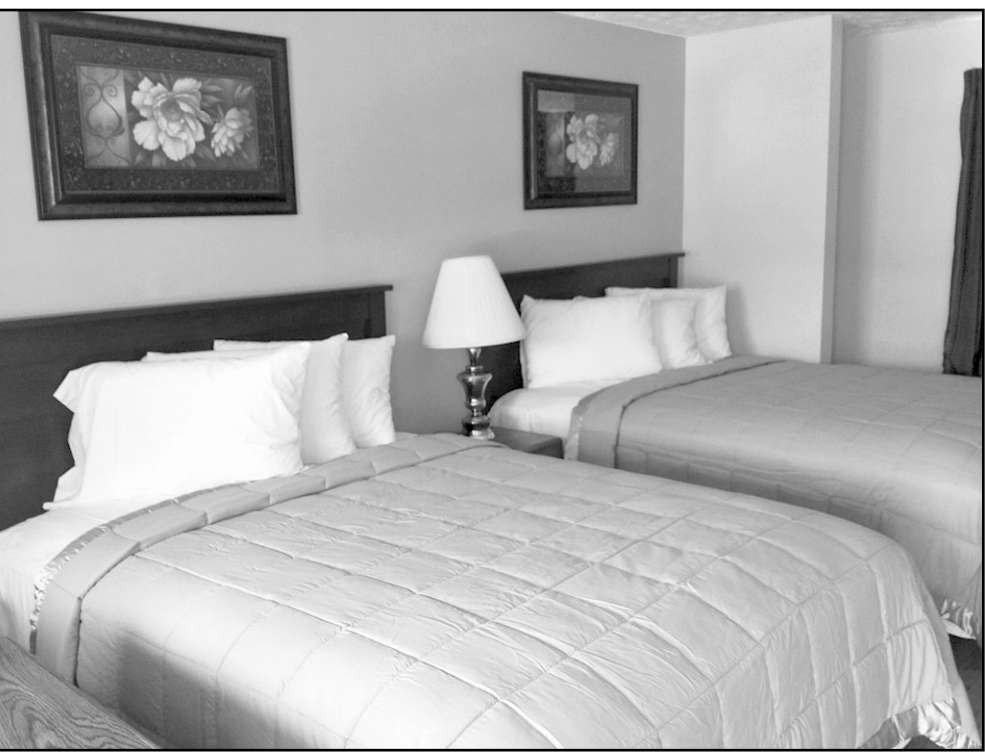

The tiny room for the person on night shift was upgraded to a full bed in Charles’ old office. The Browns’ former kitchen and sitting area was converted into the breakfast room. The office/lobby was redone and extended.

“We wanted everything to look welcoming and homey, but also like a business,” she said, adding they have spent around $100,000 on renova- tions.

“What I’m most proud of is that we’ve been able to find most of the services we need to renovate the hotel right here in town,” Nicki said. “I’d say 70 to 75 per- cent has been spent in Casey County getting local people to do the work.”

The Johnsons have worked with Ridgetop Greenhous- es, Green River Builders, Beldon Concrete, White’s Woodworking and Dowell Furniture, among others.

They also hired six em- ployees in June — a night

clerk, two desk clerks and three housekeepers.

The Johnsons had their first guest on April 6.

“We didn’t want to open any of it until it was all clean and all renovated,” Nicki said. But not long after the clean up started, someone stopped by desperately need- ing a place to stay.

Since then business has picked up and is doing great.

On average every other weekend since May, the inn has been full.

“The other weekends we’ve been at 70 to 80 per- cent,” she said.

The inn is full for Apple Festival and only a few rooms remain during the 127 yard sale Aug. 2-5.

Renovations on the 22 rooms should be complete by Christmas. All rooms will be non-smoking and some will be pet friendly — with- out carpet.

Future plans include re- placing the gutters, renovat- ing a room off of the break- fast area into a sunroom and opening the pool.

Inspectors provided a “laundry list” of things to fix to bring the pool up to state regulations, Nicki said. The pool should be open by spring and will cost around $50,000 to repair.

The Johnsons hope to be able to work out a way to offer the pool to the public but need to check with their insurance to see if that’s pos- sible.

Bobby Woodrum does the neighborly thing in filling up Dorothy Cooper’s car recently at J & B Grocery. The store installed gas pumps offer- ing Clementsville residents gas for the first time in more than 25 years.

Gas now available in Clementsville

By Larry Rowell
Staff Writer

Not only can residents fill up with tasty food in the J & B diner at Clementsville, they can also fill up the gas tank on their cars, thanks to new pumps installed on June 22. The two-pump island of- fers unleaded gas and diesel.

And, according to Man- ager Dorothy Cooper, sales have been good and people are appreciative of being able to purchase gas locally.

“So far it’s been great. People used to have to drive about five miles to the “Y” (at Crockett Trail) or 10 miles to Mannsville to buy gas,” she said.

Bobby Woodrum, 79, a resident of Clementsville all his life, said that Clements- ville has been without gaso- line for more than 25 years.

“Artis Murphy and Danny Wolford were some of the last to sell gas here in the late 70s,” Woodrum said, adding that he plans to buy gas at the store.

Woodrum said his daily routine includes a stop at the store for his breakfast meal of fried eggs, bacon, toast, and coffee.

“I had to go to the doctor in Liberty this morning and I passed up all the places in Liberty to come back here and eat,” he said.

A lunch counter type addi- tion was added to the former Frank’s Food Mart a little more than two years ago when new owners Joey and Susie Wethington took over.

The diner features break- fast items such as eggs, ba- con, fried potatoes, sausage biscuits, biscuits and gravy, and other items.

Cooper usually arrives about 4:30 a.m. and locals start filtering in shortly thereafter, she said.

For lunch and dinner, the store offers daily plate lunch specials such as meat loaf, baked spaghetti, and pinto beans and cornbread, among others.

Hand-formed and fresh hamburgers, along with pork burgers, Uncle Charlie’s tenderloin and deli meats headline a long sandwich list available to customers.

In addition, the store sells Parelle’s Pizza, which Cooper said is a real favorite, especially in the evening hours.

Reminiscent of country stores of old, the store also has bread, milk and many other grocery items.

“We have a little bit of ev- erything including automo- tive items, and, we even have Weisenberger Fish Batter mix,” Cooper said, adding that it’s not widely available in this area.

The store hosts a once-a- month fish fry with the next one scheduled for Saturday, July 28.

Still, even with gas, good food, and groceries, Lisa Ar- nold, who cooks at the store, said that it’s about serving and helping people.

“People stop in and ask where somebody lives or how to get somewhere. We’re glad when people come in,” she said.

Higher One Graphics relocates

Higher One Graphics, a graphics design company that does screen printing, embroidery, and makes signs, has relocated to downtown Liberty.

Opened in April 2011 in Yosemite, co-owners Shannon and Angie Cain and Crystal Campbell moved to Liberty for the convenience of their many customers and to attract walk-in customers.

Cain said that he works with customers to design the perfect graphic or lettering for a T-shirt, cap, hoodie, jacket, polo shirt, or just about any other garment.

In addition, the business features a 10-color embroidery machine that can also be used on just about any garment.

They accept orders for one item to 1,000 items, offered in sizes from six months to 5XL.

Prices are all-inclusive — meaning the price quoted to a cus- tomer includes everything from design to production — with no hidden fees.

The company also offers heat-pressed vinyl letters that go on signs, banners, and glass windows such as cars and store fronts.

“The banners — in different colors — range in size from 2 feet by 3 feet to 4 feet by 20 feet,” Cain said. “We also make a variety of signs for yard sales and parking lots.”

Higher One Graphics is located at 107 Courthouse Square and the phone number is 787-2996 or 706-3560.

Scissors & Suds expands

Scissors and Suds, a pet grooming and supplies store, has relocated to 704 Campbellsville St. in downtown Liberty.

The expansion includes four additional rooms to allow for specific grooming tasks and the ability to offer a larger selection of dog food, collars, leashes, specialty bags and clothes.

Owners Ryan and Brittany Allen previously ordered from catalogues but now go through a distributor with larger ship- ments.

“We have more of everything,” Brittany said.

New brands and products include Eukanuba, crates, and Advantix and Zodiac for flea and tick control.

The shop offers grain-free, all natural dog food, as well as food for senior dogs and certain breeds.

“Our prices are right there or lower than PetSmart and Pet- co,” she said. “A lot of people think since we are in a small town, the prices will be higher, but they’re not.”

They also provide boarding and daycare.

Scissors and Suds is open 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday-Friday with flexible weekday hours.

Students should check Kentucky Educational Excellence Scholarship accounts for accuracy

Kentucky high school students and 2012 graduates should check their Kentucky Educational Excellence Scholarship (KEES) accounts for accuracy.

KEES allows students to earn money for college by getting good grades in high school and for qualifying scores on the ACT or SAT.

Students eligible for free or reduced lunches may also earn awards for good scores on Advanced Placement and International Baccalaureate exams.

KEES is administered by the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority (KHEAA).

To check awards and personal information, students need to use the Zip Access function on www.kheaa.com.

Students may verify their KEES GPA is correct by taking the letter grade for each course taken during the year and converting it to a 4.0 scale on which an A = 4.0, B = 3.0, C = 2.0, D = 1.0, and F = 0. AP and IB course grades receive one extra point of weight in the calculation, making an A = 5.0, B = 4.0, etc. The GPA is calculated by adding all the points together and dividing the total by the number of credits earned during the year.

Students who need to have GPAs or other information corrected should contact their school counselor.

If students do not see any KEES information, they should call the KHEAA College Access Team at 800-928-8926.

Students do not have to apply to receive their KEES awards. If they attend an eligible college or university, KHEAA will send their award to the school once the school verifies enrollment.

Burke completes final season on UC track and field team

By Rita "Peat" Harris
Sports Correspondent

Nataushia Burke graduated from Casey County High School in 2009 and was a stand out track and field athlete during her time as a Rebel. Burke made three top 10 finishes competing in the discus throw at the Kentucky High School Athletic Association State Double A Track and Field Championship meet. Her best finish came in 2007 with a fifth place throw of 98'04". Burke was recruited by the University of the Cumberland to throw for their team and completed her third and final season with the team this past spring.

RH: What events did you compete in for Cumberland?

NB: I threw disc, shot put, hammer, weight, and javelin; but, mainly shot Put and disc.

RH: What did you like most about your collegiate athlete experience?

NB: The things I enjoyed most about being a college athlete was getting to travel to different states to compete, and also the memories I made with my teammates, who became some of my best friends.

RH: Did you accomplish any major goals or milestones

photo/SUBMITTED

Nataushia Burke (left) stands with opponent Ashley Wilson of Russell Springs, whom she has competed against in the field through her entire throwing career. Burke graduated from Casey County in 2009 and attended The University of the Cumberland. She just completed her final season on the track and field team and has one year of school left.

while throwing on the collegiate level—personally or as a team?

NB: I did improve in throwing shot put. I ended up setting a new personal best while I was competing.

RH: Although you are done as a college athlete do you think throwing will be a part of your life in anyway in the future?

NB: Although I have finished competing in college, I have always enjoyed throwing. It's a wonderful stress reliever, so I do plan on continuing that just for fun. I have always wanted to come back and be like Coach (Rex) Rader and help out the youth in my spare time and show them things to enhance their own techniques.

RH: What are you studying currently and do you have any post-graduation plans?

NB: Currently I am pursuing a double major in human services and criminal justice. I have many career choices with the both of them combined, but I am currently undecided on which position I will choose. I am focusing my last year on working at a local food place near my university and finishing my core classes so that I will have some savings once I do graduate.

Editor's Note: Throughout the summer, Sports Correspondent Rita Harris will catch up with various Casey County Rebel and Lady Rebel alumni who have gone on to pursue athletics after high school in this seasonal weekly feature, Alumni Spotlight.

American pride glowing throughout Olympic Trials

There is so, so much I could contribute to the sports world in this week's column. I'll go ahead and break it to you that I'm not going to recap the NBA draft. (Sorry, Wildcat fans. It is a cool historical event, though.)

I am very interested in the long-awaited end to the BCS Bowl series in college football, which is being replaced by a four-team playoff beginning in 2014; but I'll save my college football rants for the fall.

As I sit on my couch to write this and the Olympic Trials broadcast before me and my American pride begins to glow; how can I write about anything else?

No matter the sport the TV is displaying, it has my attention. The Olympics themselves will hold their own appeal, of course, but the trials are just as compelling and sometimes more heartbreaking for me to watch.

At least in the Olympics you have a team to root for. For me,

Rita "Peat" HARRIS
Sports Correspondent

the athletes at the trials are all incredibly amazing and dedicated athletes taking their one shot to make it to the real deal in London. I have no one to root against.

There is no doubt in my mind that even the last place finisher or lowest scorer in these trials has incredible skill and strength. Some of them compete in the trials, simply happy to be there, knowing their chances of making the team are slim to none compared to their competition.

Others come with hope for a first trip or the hope for a medal in London or a hope for a second chance at a missed opportunity in Beijing. One crucial moment can make or break that.

I find myself watching 45-year-old Tara Dorres move through the water as though she was born in the waves, and capture win after win to make her sixth trip to the Olympic arena. 45? Really??

Then I turn around to see not quite-16-year-old Kyla Ross stand solo in front of thousands to face a set of uneven bars. Her shoulders, legs, abs, and arms could put any athlete to shame. And I called myself a 'serious' athlete at that age??

While you want the best of the best to represent the U.S. in London, it is still heart wrenching to watch another athlete — who has also put in training beyond anything I can imagine — just miss the cut.

Seeing Nastia Liukin plummet to the ground during her uneven bar routine sent the crowd silent as well as the announcers. Alone on the stage with such an extreme error leaves most without words; however, with the conclusion of her routine came thunderous applause for her courage.

Liukin will not be traveling to London after claiming five medals in 2008.

Hearing the gun shoot twice instantly at the start of the men's 200-meter semi-final track and field event was a downer. One false start and Texas Christian University's Charles Silmon was done. It's not that Silmon was expected to qualify in the 200; but he'd earned his right to be there, and a silly mistake put him out of the competition.

The Olympics and trials, both, give us both moments of triumph and moments of heartbreak, but that is what makes them so special. It's not pee-wee anymore. Not everyone gets to be there and of those who make it, not all of them can bring home a medal.

I am proud of and excited for all of those athletes who will be representing our stars and stripes later this month. Congrats and I'm looking forward to cheering on Team U.S.A. Happy Independence Day!

Remember boat safety

Remember to boat safely as temperatures climb and traffic on Kentucky's waterways increases around the July 4 holiday season. "We're asking boaters to watch out for people in the water and swimmers to be careful," said Capt. Mike Fields, boating law administrator for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "People will be in the water trying to get some relief from the heat, and we traditionally have the heaviest boating traffic of the year during the Fourth of July holiday period." About 100 people a year are victims of drowning in Kentucky.

"Typically, it's someone trying to swim across a lake, or a cove," said Fields. "Swim with a buddy, and don't get too far out in deep water." Bystanders may not realize a swimmer is in distress until it's too late. Approximately 60 percent of all drownings are witnessed. Fields said there are signs to look for: The swimmer's head may be back and the mouth open, but the person may not be able to call for help. A swimmer in this position with outstretched arms who appears to be slapping the water may be in trouble. The best advice in severe heat is to stay hydrated by drinking plenty of water.

Impaired boaters are of special concern to the law enforcement officers who will be patrolling Kentucky's lakes and rivers. Boating Under the Influence (BUI) is against the law and represents a danger to everyone on and in the water. Sun, wind, noise, vibration and movement, which are common to the boating environment, when combined with alcohol intake, can cause fatigue which impacts a boat operator's coordination, judgment and reaction time.

"Most people understand the potential hazards of drinking and boating. The small minority of people that still think alcohol is a required part of boating need to understand the risk they are taking, and the danger they pose to themselves and others," said Fields.

Private Outdoor Lighting - Rate P. O. LT.

Street Lighting Service (Rate ST.LT. – Sheet No. 35) and Private Outdoor Lighting Service (Rate P.O.LT. – Sheet No. 36) are being reorganized into two rate schedules. The first schedule will be named Lighting Services (Rate LS) and will be a consolidation of lighting fixtures currently offered. The second schedule will be named Restricted Lighting Service (Rate RLS) and will be a consolidation of lighting fixtures that are in service but no longer available for new or replacement installations. The current and proposed rates are presented below based on the lights to be included in Rate LS and Rate RLS. The lights proposed to be contained in the specific schedule are shown in bold type with the current light and rate sheet shown below the proposed light.

of equipment that exceed $20,000 in compliance with KRS 424.260," auditors stated.

At issue was the purchase of a 2010 Massey Ferguson 2670 tractor with cab and side mower for $50,400 from what auditors said was a "local vendor."

Any purchases under $20,000 are not bid out and Wright said that the court made three separate purchases under $20,000, which auditors believe was one purchase.

"We bought the tractor from Liberty Motors and the mower was bought from a company in Tennessee. Liberty Motors took the tractor to Tennessee and had the mower put on," Wright said.

A third invoice was for a cab and extras, Wright said, adding that the court made the same type of purchase the year before and weren't cited for non-compliance issues.

Gateway Park grants

The audit also cited the court for issues regarding federal grant monies for Gateway Park.

Funds were awarded from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) to rebuild the Community Center and ball fields after being severely damaged in the May 2010 flood.

The court was cited for non-compliance under the "activities allowed/allowable costs" FEMA regulation.

"The scope of the work per the project worksheet called for replacement of a free standing concession stand at Gateway Park. Based upon testing and investigation, the free standing concession stand was neither replaced or rebuilt. It appears the grant funds were used to repair the concession stand at the Community Center. Therefore, the scope of the work was not followed resulting in questioned costs," auditors stated.

Wright said that the monies were spent on a concession stand at Gateway Park.

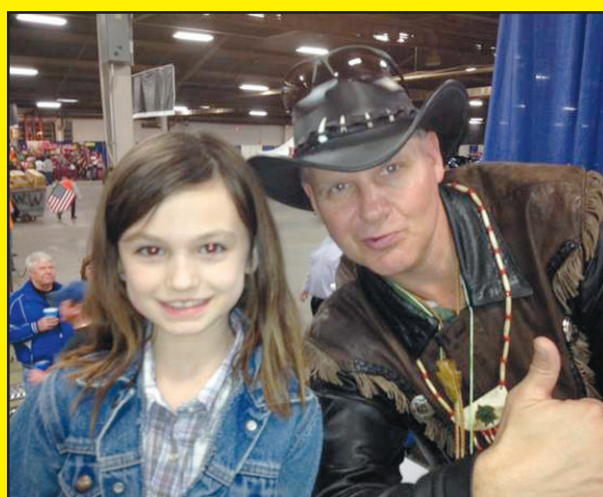

"All monies from FEMA were spent on Gateway Park on restoring/repairing from flood damage. The project worksheet will be amended in the future for the scope of the work to be performed," he said.

Even with these and other non-compliance issues, McBeath said there was no criminal wrongdoing.

"Our office has no enforcement powers and if there were suspicions of criminal activity, it would have been turned over to law enforcement authorities," he said.
